Hieroglyphic Writing of the Epi-Olmec indians

Mexico 100 BC - AD 450

The Epi-Olmecs engraved many symbols or signs on pottery, statuettes, batons/scepters, stelas and bas reliefs that have been recognized as a possible form of writing. The Epi-Olmec Writing is Unique. The Signs are similar to the writing used by the Vai people of West Africa.

The Epi-Olmecs spoke an aspect of the Manding (Malinke-Bambara) language spoken in West Africa.

The Epi-Olmec people introduced writing to the New World. The Epi-Olmec script is a logosyllabic script. The Epi-Olmec had both a syllabic and hieroglyphic script. The hieroglyphic signs were simply Epi-Olmec syllabic signs used to make pictures. There are two forms of Epi-Olmec hieroglyphic writing: the pure hieroglyphics (or picture signs) and the phonetic hiero-glyphics, which are a combination of syllabic and logographic signs.

The decipherment of the Epi-Olmec writing of ancient Mexico provides us with keen insight into the world of Epi-Olmec.

Peter has redesigned the Hieroglyphic Writing of the Epi-Olmecs indians and developed 64 unique symbols, which represent the "SPIRIT OF LIFE".

These symbols shows us the life of an old indian civilization from Mexico, the "Epi-Olmecs". Indians with a strong relationship to nature. Their symbols can link us to this invisible power of nature. I hope these symbols will help you, like it helps me, to guide you through life in times you need it. Remember what life is all about and let it give you the power when you need it to face every challenge, whether it is in a relationship, at work, in sports, religion or in health.

Use it as your own personal sponsor or mascot in life!
Peter Allard

My inspiration: "La Mojarra Stela 1

La Mojarra Stela 1

It was discovered in 1986, pulled from the Acula River near La Mojarra, Veracruz, Mexico, not far from the Tres Zapotes archaeological site. Originating from the Epi-Olmec culture (a successor culture to the Olmecs) and dating to the 2nd century AD. La Mojarra Stela 1 is a carved limestone slab dating to 156 AD that features approximately 535 glyphs in the Isthmian script. Discovered in Mexico, this monument from the Epi-Olmec culture is one of the oldest known written documents from Mesoamerica.
